3. FINANCIAL RISK MANAGEMENT

3.1 Overview

AGAMA Charity is exposed to various financial risks in the course of its operations, principally credit risk, liquidity risk, foreign currency risk and risks relating to the availability and timing of donor funding. The Charity's financial risk management objective is to safeguard its financial resources, maintain adequate liquidity, ensure the proper use of funds and support the sustainable implementation of its charitable programmes.

The Board of Directors provides oversight of financial management and internal controls, while management is responsible for implementing appropriate procedures to identify, assess and manage financial risks. The Charity seeks to ensure that financial resources are managed prudently and applied in accordance with donor agreements, approved budgets, organisational policies and applicable regulatory requirements.

3.2 Credit Risk

Credit risk is the risk that a counterparty may fail to meet its contractual financial obligations, resulting in a financial loss to the Charity. The Charity's exposure to credit risk may arise principally from cash held with financial institutions, amounts receivable from donors and other outstanding receivables, where applicable.

The Charity manages credit risk by maintaining financial resources with recognised financial institutions, monitoring outstanding receivables and reviewing the recoverability of amounts due. Where donor contributions are pledged but not yet received, the Charity considers the timing and certainty of receipt when planning programme expenditure.

At 31 December 2025, management assesses credit risk based on the nature of the financial assets held, the reliability of counterparties and the availability of supporting documentation.

3.3 Liquidity Risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that the Charity may be unable to meet its financial obligations as they fall due. This risk may arise from delays in receiving donor contributions, unexpected operating expenditure or commitments that exceed available financial resources.

AGAMA Charity manages liquidity risk through annual budgeting, expenditure monitoring, cash-flow planning and the prioritisation of essential programme and operational obligations. Expenditure is expected to remain within approved budgets and available funding, subject to applicable donor restrictions.

Management monitors available cash balances and anticipated receipts to ensure that sufficient funds are maintained to meet financial commitments as they become due. At the reporting date, the Charity's liquidity position is assessed using its recorded cash and bank balances, outstanding liabilities and expected funding receipts.

3.4 Foreign Currency Risk

Foreign currency risk arises when financial transactions, donor contributions or programme expenditure are denominated in currencies other than the Tanzanian shilling, which is the Charity's functional currency, where applicable.

The Charity may receive contributions or incur programme costs in foreign currencies, including United States dollars. Changes in exchange rates may therefore affect the Tanzanian shilling value of funds received, expenditure incurred and outstanding monetary balances.

The Charity manages foreign currency risk by monitoring exchange-rate movements, recording transactions using appropriate exchange rates and maintaining supporting records for foreign currency receipts and payments. Where necessary, management considers exchange-rate differences when preparing budgets and financial reports.

3.5 Funding and Donor Concentration Risk

The Charity depends on contributions from individual donors, trusts and foundations, private companies, institutional partners and other funding sources to implement its charitable programmes. Funding risk arises when expected contributions are delayed, reduced or discontinued.

To manage this risk, AGAMA Charity seeks to maintain relationships with existing supporters, develop new partnerships, diversify its funding sources and align programme commitments with confirmed or reasonably expected resources. Restricted donor funds are monitored to ensure that they are used for the purposes specified in the relevant agreements.

The Charity recognises that the timing and continuity of donor funding may affect programme implementation and therefore incorporates funding availability into its financial planning and expenditure decisions.

3.6 Capital and Reserve Management

As a charitable organisation, AGAMA Charity does not operate primarily to generate profits for distribution to owners or shareholders. Its financial objective is to maintain sufficient resources to support its charitable purposes, meet its obligations and sustain approved programmes.

The Board of Directors oversees the Charity's financial position and considers the adequacy of available reserves in relation to operating requirements, programme commitments and potential funding interruptions. Any reserves maintained are intended to support financial stability and the continued delivery of the Charity's mission.

3.7 Monitoring and Internal Controls

The Charity's financial risks are managed through internal controls and oversight arrangements that include:

- Preparation and approval of annual budgets.
- Authorisation and documentation of financial transactions.
- Maintenance of accounting records and supporting evidence.
- Monitoring of cash balances, expenditure and outstanding obligations.
- Appropriate segregation of financial responsibilities, where practicable.
- Review of financial reports by management and the Board of Directors.
- Compliance with donor conditions and applicable financial requirements.

These controls are intended to promote accountability, protect the Charity's assets and reduce the risk of errors, misuse of funds and unauthorised expenditure.

3.8 Overall Risk Assessment

Management considers financial risk management an integral part of

3.9 Market Risk

Market risk is the risk that changes in market prices, including foreign exchange rates, interest rates and other relevant market variables, may affect the Charity's financial position or future cash flows.

AGAMA Charity's exposure to market risk may arise from fluctuations in foreign exchange rates affecting donor contributions and programme expenditure denominated in foreign currencies, as well as changes in interest rates applicable to financial assets or liabilities, where relevant.

The Charity manages market risk by monitoring changes in economic and market conditions, preparing realistic programme budgets, reviewing expenditure against approved allocations and maintaining appropriate financial controls. Management also considers exchange-rate movements when planning activities funded by international donors to minimise potential budget shortfalls.

The Charity does not undertake speculative financial transactions as part of its ordinary charitable activities. Where material market exposures arise, management evaluates their potential impact and reports significant matters to the Board of Directors for appropriate action.

As at 31 December 2025, the Charity's exposure to market risk should be assessed based on its actual financial assets, liabilities, foreign currency transactions and any applicable interest-bearing balances. Any required.

3.10 Credit Risk

Credit risk is the risk that a counterparty may fail to meet its contractual financial obligations, resulting in a financial loss to AGAMA Charity. The Charity's exposure to credit risk arises primarily from cash and bank balances held with financial institutions, outstanding donor contributions and other receivables, where applicable.

Management of Credit Risk

AGAMA Charity manages credit risk through prudent financial management practices and internal control procedures designed to protect its financial resources. These measures include maintaining funds with recognised financial institutions, monitoring amounts receivable, reviewing the recoverability of outstanding balances and maintaining appropriate supporting documentation for financial transactions.

The Charity also considers the reliability of donors and other counterparties when assessing expected funding receipts and planning programme expenditure. Donor contributions are recognised and recorded in accordance with the applicable accounting policies and the relevant terms and conditions.

Exposure to Credit Risk

The maximum exposure to credit risk at the reporting date generally represents the carrying amounts of financial assets exposed to credit risk, including bank balances and eligible receivables, before taking account of any applicable collateral or other credit enhancements.

Management reviews outstanding receivables and considers whether any amounts may be impaired or unlikely to be recovered. Where appropriate, provisions for expected credit losses are recognised in accordance with the applicable financial reporting framework.

Assessment at the Reporting Date reported in the financial statements, together with information concerning the financial institutions holding its funds and the recoverability of outstanding receivables.

Management seeks to ensure that credit risk remains within acceptable limits through regular monitoring, proper documentation and oversight by the Board of Directors. Any material concentration of credit risk, reporting framework.

3.11 Liquidity Risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that AGAMA Charity may encounter difficulty in meeting its financial obligations as they fall due. The Charity's exposure to liquidity risk arises primarily from the timing of donor contributions, the availability of cash and bank balances, programme expenditure commitments and other operating liabilities.

Management of Liquidity Risk

AGAMA Charity manages liquidity risk through prudent cash-flow planning, preparation of annual budgets, monitoring of expenditure and regular review of available financial resources. Management seeks to ensure that programme activities and operating commitments are aligned with available funding and that expenditure is authorised in accordance with approved budgets and internal financial procedures.

The Charity prioritises essential programme activities and operational obligations while considering the timing of expected donor contributions. Management also monitors outstanding liabilities and anticipated cash requirements to identify potential funding shortfalls and take appropriate corrective action.

Funding and Cash-Flow Management

The Charity relies on donor contributions, grants, partnerships and other legitimate sources of funding to support its charitable activities. Delays in receiving expected contributions may affect the timing of programme implementation and the settlement of financial obligations.

To mitigate this risk, AGAMA Charity seeks to maintain accurate accounting records, monitor cash and bank balances, strengthen relationships with donors and avoid making financial commitments that cannot reasonably be supported by available or expected resources.

Liquidity Position at the Reporting Date

As at 31 December 2025, the Charity's liquidity position should be evaluated by reference to its cash and bank balances, outstanding liabilities, restricted funds and expected funding receipts. Restricted donor funds are considered in accordance with the applicable donor agreements and should not be treated as freely available to meet unrelated obligations.

Management is responsible for monitoring the Charity's ability to meet its obligations as they fall due and reporting significant liquidity concerns to the Board of Directors.

Overall Assessment

The Board of Directors oversees the Charity's financial sustainability and the adequacy of its financial resources. Management considers liquidity risk as part of the annual budgeting and financial reporting processes to support continuity of charitable programmes and the timely settlement of obligations.

Any material liquidity shortfalls, significant concentrations of funding, contractual payment obligations or uncertainties affecting the Charity's ability to continue its operations should be disclosed in the financial statements where required by the applicable financial reporting framework.
